

Associate Professor in the Department of Health Promotion and Behavioral Sciences at the University of Louisville, School of Public Health with a special interest in program evaluation, health equity, international health and community based participatory research. Over my more than 30-year career in Public Health, I have worked in many countries and I am the author of the textbook, Evaluating Public and Community Health Programs, published by Jossey-Bass that is now in its second edition. I have authored many presentations and publications. I am the director of the doctoral program, a member of the American Public Health Association, President of Delta Omega Beta Pi Chapter, SPHIS, Chair of the Board Family Health Centers, Past President of the Prospect Goshen Rotary Club and past chair of the International Service Committee. Worked on the Cervical Cancer Prevention Team for Haiti in both global grants.